Further information on examinations

English language knowledge is compulsory. English knowledge will be assessed through the written examination and during the interview. During the interview will be also assessed the knowledge of other foreign languages such as French, German or Spanish.

In the written examination to be held at candidate's choice in Italian or in English with an abstract of about 200 words in the non selected language, the candidate is required to write his/her exam paper focusing on features of transnational, comparative and European law, also considering the historical evolution of the legal institutions examined.

The interview will focus on the research project chosen among those listed and offered by the PHD program. The interview will be in English and in Italian, and also in French, German or Spanish if the candidate wishes.

The research project must be written in Italian and in English (max 3000 words, bibliography excluded, for each language). The candidate must choose one project title among those listed and offered by the PHD programme. The Examining Board will evaluate the scientific dimension of the project, its feasibility related to the length of the PhD, the target setting, the scientific impact of outcomes.

The candidate must organize his/her research project according to:
a) Title of Research Project - clearly indicating the research object.
b) Abstract of the project - a short summary of the research project purposes and objectives.
c) State of the art – providing a brief account of the existing European and possibly global literature highlighting the most relevant references, specifically focusing on the yet unanswered questions with which the research project will deal.
d) Project targets - general and specific objectives of the project, referring to the theoretical and empirical unresolved questions pointed out in the previous section.
e) Research design – defining the project development phases, the procedures for the collection of data and the methodology used for data analysis, highlighting the reasons militating for spending at least one year to do research abroad. Please point out the timeline for each phase of the project.
f) Expected results - explaining the expected results, according to the research area and the project objectives.
g) Innovative elements and critical points - explaining the reasons why the project is relevant and the theoretical and practical innovative features. Limits and potential critical elements, relating to time and available resources, will also be highlighted.
h) Bibliography, should contain from 10 to 20 references
The research project must include also one or more international research periods, a minimum of 12 months spent abroad during the PhD implementation.
Project proposals eligible for a co-supervised PhD programme (joint doctoral research thesis or "co-tutelle" of thesis) with a foreign Academic Institution will command special consideration.
