COURSE TITLE
Social Ontology

TEACHING PERIOD
2nd term

SCIENTIFIC AREA
Theoretical Philosophy

LANGUAGE USED TO TEACH
English

COURSE SUMMARY
The concept of institution is central to social and political philosophy. It encompasses both the origins of social philosophy in the thinking of Gianbattista Vico and its more recent developments in the thought of Schmitt, Arendt, and Santi Romano. The course provides an interdisciplinary path that aims to reconstruct the history of the concept of institution from its origins in Roman thought to its applications in contemporary philosophy and legal thought.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES
The course is intended for all students at the Laurea Magistrale level. The aim is for the student to acquire knowledge of the topics and themes discussed in class. The instructor's focus will be on the following skills: understanding, reasoning, contextualizing, and processing.
