COURSE SUMMARY

This course analyses the main issues related to the functioning of private and public institutions. The module covered by the VP will present international economics topics related to the functioning of the European Union (and other international institutions) along with the economic motivations of trade integration and economic policy coordination (e.g. macroeconomic coordination, monetary union, exchange rate systems). Attention shall be devoted to the institutional structure of supranational decision making (e.g. the EU voting system).

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

At the end of the course the student should:

- know alternative public and private economic institutions;
- apply the modern microeconomic theory to analyze the functioning of different institutions;
- know the relevant empirical evidence and use this evidence to choose among alternative theories;

- understand the impact of different institutions on long-term growth of a country;
- know the relevant literature on the economic analysis of institutions.
