COURSE SUMMARY

This course aims to provide students with key interpretative instruments, in order to enable them to critically examine the evolution of the economic theory from marginalism to the present developments. It draws on and critically reexamines several topics and analytical tools of Microeconomics and Macroeconomics taking into account the historical and institutional framework in which these were elaborated. It also analyses the complex interactions between economic theory, "facts" and economic policy choices.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

After completing this course the student is expected to:

- i) know the main issues of modern economic thought;
- ii) know the evolution of the main economic theories and paradigms;

- iii) be able to rethink critically the main analytical tools studied in the Macroeconomics and Microeconomics courses;
- iv) be able to analyse the interactions between economic theory, "facts" and economic policy.

VISITING PROFESSOR PROFILE

VP is required to teach the part about Keynes and post-keynesianism or alternatively about the latest development of standard economics.
