COURSE TITLE

Laboratory of Greek History

TEACHING PERIOD

2nd term

SCIENTIFIC AREA

Ancient History

LANGUAGE USED TO TEACH

Italian

COURSE SUMMARY

In alignment with the learning objectives of the specialized Degree Course, the Laboratory intends to give students the opportunity to perform a research training in Greek History on a topic of their choice within the more general theme to which the course is dedicated, "the IV-III centuries BC: the Early Hellenistic Period".

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

The Laboratory aims at developing the following student skills:

- Ability to independently and critically analyze a topic through a methodologically correct interpretation of the available sources, both literary and documentary;
- Ability to search for references related to the topic at issue by using the appropriate bibliographic resources;
- Ability to construct an effective and coherent argument by suitably integrating the data stemming from the ancient sources with the results already achieved by modern research on the topic;
- Ability to present the results of one's work in public and to profit from the dialectical confrontation with one's peers and teachers;

- Ability to draw up a short essay, including: status quaestionis resulting from reading the main previous literature; autonomous in-depth study and elaboration of the issues under discussion; possible lines of development and expected results of the research; main bibliography.
